

WHY CLIENTS CHOOSE PRF

Subtle renewal, made from you.

Platelet-rich fibrin is prepared from a small sample of your own blood and used in a personalized aesthetic plan. It is designed for gradual, natural-looking improvement rather than dramatic correction.

Benefits we may discuss

- A refreshed look beneath the eyes and in other delicate areas
- Softer-looking fine lines and improved overall skin quality
- More even-looking texture, tone and radiance
- Subtle, temporary volume with EZ Gel where appropriate
- A client-derived option without synthetic filler material

A plan selected for your goals

Liquid PRF, EZ Gel and topical PRF are different approaches. A licensed provider confirms which option, treatment area and timing are appropriate after reviewing your health history and expectations.

A small blood draw is part of every PRF appointment. Temporary redness, swelling, tenderness or bruising may occur. Not every client is a candidate, and individual results vary.

CLIENT-DERIVED OPTIONS FOR SKIN QUALITY, DELICATE AREAS AND SUBTLE VOLUME

THE FOUNDATION

What is PRF?

Platelet-rich fibrin (PRF) is prepared from a small sample of your own blood. After centrifugation, the platelet- and fibrin-rich portion is used the same day in a provider-directed aesthetic plan.

At House of Rose, PRF may remain liquid for an injectable treatment, be prepared into a soft EZ Gel, or be applied topically during a selected needling appointment.

Why clients are drawn to PRF

PRF is client-derived, personalized and designed for subtle change. Its fibrin-rich preparation supports a gradual approach that may help improve the appearance of fine lines, texture, tone and delicate under-eye concerns.

What makes it different

Injectable PRF, EZ Gel and topical PRF are not interchangeable. They have different preparation, placement and provider requirements. PRF is also not the same as hyaluronic acid dermal filler.

A simple same-day pathway

1. Consultation and candidacy review
2. Small blood draw and centrifuge preparation
3. Provider-selected PRF format and placement
4. Written aftercare and individualized follow-up

THREE CLEAR PATHS

How we use PRF

01 INJECTABLE PRF

Liquid PRF is placed by a licensed medical provider in selected facial areas after consultation. It may be discussed for delicate under-eye concerns, the appearance of fine lines and overall skin quality when a subtle, gradual approach is appropriate.

02 EZ GEL BIO-FILLER

Part of the PRF preparation is converted into a soft, client-derived gel. EZ Gel may be considered for subtle, temporary volume beneath the eyes, around smile lines or in other provider-selected areas. It is not a structural replacement for every dermal filler.

03 MICRONEEDLING + TOPICAL PRF

PRF is applied to the skin surface as a topical adjunct during an appropriate needling service. This approach focuses on the appearance of texture, tone, fine lines and radiance. The PRF is not injected or delivered into the skin by the device.

The right path depends on the concern, the treatment area, your health history, your preferences and the provider's assessment.

BENEFITS + EXPERIENCE

What may improve

Under-eyes - a smoother, more rested-looking appearance in a delicate area

Fine lines - softer-looking lines and refreshed-looking skin

Texture + tone - more even-looking skin quality and radiance

Subtle volume - temporary, natural-looking support with EZ Gel where appropriate

What your visit includes

Before - consultation, health-history review and treatment-area assessment

During - small blood draw, same-day preparation and the selected service

After - written care instructions, recovery guidance and follow-up timing

Results develop gradually

Research on platelet concentrates in facial aesthetics is encouraging, but preparation methods, protocols and outcomes vary. More than one visit may be discussed, and any change may be gradual and temporary.

Not every client is a candidate.

Medications, bleeding or clotting history, active skin concerns, pregnancy or breastfeeding, immune status and other health factors may change or delay the plan. Your provider makes the final decision after assessment.
