

PRF · REGENERATIVE THERAPY

The Regenerative Layer Behind Every Treatment.

PRF is prepared from your own blood and applied to work alongside the treatments you already book — designed to give your skin more to build with, visit after visit.

THE SCIENCE, SIMPLIFIED

What PRF Actually Is

Platelet-Rich Fibrin (PRF) is prepared from a small sample of your own blood, spun down to concentrate your platelets, growth factors, and fibrin — the same proteins your body already uses to repair itself.

At House of Rose, topical PRF is prepared chairside and applied to the skin's surface as part of an eligible microneedling treatment. It is not injected. Because it comes from your own blood, it is added to your plan the same day it is drawn.

Why We Layer It In

PRF was never meant to stand alone.

Applied on top of the treatments already doing the work — resurfacing, exfoliation, light-based therapy — PRF is designed to support your skin's own collagen remodeling process, so the investment you're already making has more raw material to build with. Think of it less as a stand-alone appointment and more as an amplifier you bring to the treatments already on your plan.

ASK YOUR PROVIDER

Eligibility, timing, and which treatments PRF can be layered into are determined by your provider during consultation. Individual results vary.

PRF + LUMECCA IPL

Light Therapy, Layered With Regeneration

Lumecca is a broad-spectrum IPL (intense pulsed light) treatment available at House of Rose, used to address the visible appearance of uneven tone, sun damage, and redness-prone skin.

Because light-based treatments like Lumecca work by prompting a visible response in the skin, providers can choose to layer a topical PRF step into the same plan — designed to support the skin's own renewal process while it's already primed to respond. It's a pairing built around timing: PRF meets your skin exactly when it's doing the most work.

The Idea

Correct tone and pigment with Lumecca. Layer in topical PRF to support what comes next. Two treatments, one plan, working toward the same goal.

ASK YOUR PROVIDER

Lumecca and PRF are two separate treatments performed as part of a personalized plan. Sequencing, spacing, and eligibility are determined by your provider. Individual results vary.

PRF + MORPHEUS8

RF Microneedling, Layered With Regeneration

Morpheus8 is RF (radiofrequency) microneedling available at House of Rose, designed to address the visible appearance of texture, acne scarring, and stretch marks.

Because Morpheus8 creates a controlled network of micro-channels across the treatment area, providers can choose to layer a topical PRF step into the same visit — designed to support the skin's own remodeling process while it's already primed to respond. Ask your provider whether adding PRF to your Morpheus8 plan is right for you.

The Idea

Address texture, scarring, and stretch marks with Morpheus8. Layer in topical PRF to support what your skin does next.

ASK YOUR PROVIDER

This pairing is available by provider recommendation as part of a personalized treatment plan. Individual results vary.

BUILD YOUR OWN RITUAL

PRF Plays Well With (Nearly) Everything

PRF isn't limited to one treatment. Here's where clients most often layer it in.

Microneedling

Our flagship PRF pairing. Microneedling opens the door; topical PRF is applied right behind it, on the same visit.

Glo2Facial

An oxygenating, hydrating finish that layers beautifully onto a PRF-based visit.

Dermaplaning

The most common way to prep skin ahead of a PRF-based treatment, for a smoother surface to build on.

BioRePeel

Ask your provider whether an add-on resurfacing step belongs in your PRF plan.

MOST CLIENTS PAIR THREE OR MORE

A prep step, a resurfacing or light-based treatment, and PRF — in the same visit or across a short series. Ask your provider to design yours.

DESIGN YOUR REGENERATIVE PLAN

PRF Isn't One Appointment. It's a Building Block.

Bring it up at your next visit and ask your provider to help you design a plan around it — PRF, paired with the treatments already earning a place on your calendar.
